ARCHBISHOP IAKOVOS LEADERSHIP 100 AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE

Theodore P. Angelopoulos
and Ambassador Gianna
Angelopoulos-Daskalaki

The Archbishop Iakovos Leadership 100 Award for Excellence was established by the Archbishop Iakovos Leadership 100 Endowment Fund, Incorporated in honor of its visionary founder, the late Archbishop Iakovos, and is bestowed on outstanding Greek and Greek American leaders who have excelled in the pursuit of their vocation and exhibited the gift of leadership.

The 2008 Award goes for the first time to two members of Leadership 100, Mr. Theodore P. Angelopoulos and Ambassador Gianna Angelopoulos-Daskalaki, for their accomplishments in business, public service and philanthropy.

After heading Greece's bid to host the Olympics in 1996, Gianna was appointed Ambassador-at-Large for her talents and service to Greece. She was asked to take the Presidency of the Athens 2004 Organizing Committee for the Olympic Games in 2000 when Athens was in danger of losing the Olympic Games. Under her leadership, Athens gave the world what IOC President Jacques Rogge called: "an unforgettable, dream Games".

Theodore P. Angelopoulos, a leading Greek industrialist and shipping magnate, played a pivotal role in the successful bid and hosting of the 2004 Olympic Games. Following the tradition of his father, Panagiotis, he is the lifelong Sovereign of the Ecumenical Patriarch of Constantinople.

Together, the couple is responsible for extensive charitable work, promoting science, culture and education and advancing health care. They have endowed the Angelopoulos Professorship in Public Health and International Development at Harvard University.
